

A NOVEL LABOR-SAVER. Not a runaway freight car arguing with the interior of a machine shop, but the newest mechanical marvel in the science of bread-stuff handling that picks up a box car loaded with grain and empties it—at the rate of forty cars an hour—as quickly as a man would pick up and pour out a bag of flour. This wonderful apparatus, part of the modern equipment of the P. R. R.'s Baltimore grain elevator, tilts the grain car at such an angle that the wheat pours into a bin below the elevated railroad track.

A HARD WINTER AHEAD, say the waterfront weather prognosticators, as a result of the unusually early appearance of the seagulls in the harbor. Here are some of the thousands of the graceful birds following in the wake of the Olympic as she came up the bay the other day.

Left—TEDDY, the famous dog movie star, known the world over to Mack Sennett comedy enthusiasts, that has just signed a new contract at such a fat salary that he can eat filet mignon three times a day and still put money in the bank.

Right—"DUTY." A striking bronze by Turillo Sindoni, a noted Italian sculptor of Rome, designed in memory of the officers of his country who fell in the World War.

MADE OF MALLINSON'S THE ONLY GENUINE PUSSY WILLOW SILK

This label is in the genuine.

No. 4261—Is it the becoming collar or the flattering sheen of the peerless Pussy Willow that makes this Lerner blouse selected by Doris Kenyon, the A. H. Woods star, such a universal favorite? $11.95.

No. 4262—Fine tucks—that's all—but they break the plainness of a Lerner blouse of Pussy Willow that Mary Lewis, the Prima Donna of "The Greenwich Village Follies of 1920," knows is the correct accompaniment to the tailored and sports suit. $12.95.

No. 4256—A narrow frilling that ruffles its way around the collar, the cuffs and down the front, takes away the severity of this Lerner blouse of Pussy Willow preferred by Margaret Mower of "Welcome Stranger." $11.95.

No. 4263—A tucked front and a frilly collar add a feminine distinction to this Lerner blouse of Pussy Willow worn by Betty Hale of the "Night Boat." $12.95.
